

Hi!

In the release, 12 September, we're adding updates for phrase templates integrated into the chat and the possibility to modify questionnaires in a new way. We hope they will contribute to a more efficient way of working.

Have a great week,
The team at Doctrin

Modify questionnaires - show and hide questions

It is now possible to show and hide questions to customise questionnaires for your unit. The questions can be in one or more questionnaires.

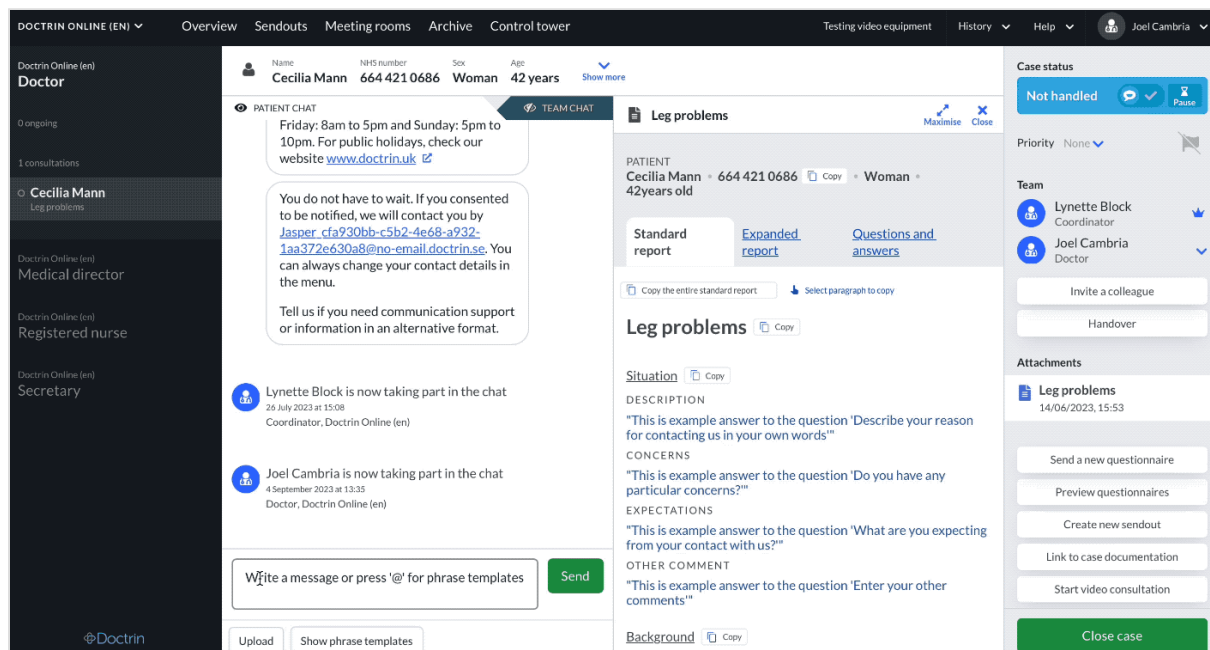

Questions of the same type, e.g. "Ongoing medication" or "concerns" are gathered in question groups that users with the Unit Manager permission profile can easily switch on/off as needed in Doctrin admin. If the question group "concerns" is switched off, all questions related to concerns are hidden in all questionnaires for a unit. Changes take effect immediately and affect all questionnaires for a unit.

The selection of question groups is continuously expanded based on feedback. They become available once Doctrin's medical team has activated them.

For specific requests to add or hide questions, contact Doctrin support; support@doctrin.se. Depending on the configuration required, an administrative cost may apply.

Improvements

Phrase templates integrated directly into the chat message field

During spring, we launched a new way to search for phrase templates while writing chat messages. This also included the possibility to add several phrase templates in one message (stacking). We have gathered feedback about the change until now - and today we are launching additional improvements.

To make it even easier to use phrase templates, they have been integrated in the same field where you write messages. Previously there was a separate field for templates which created extra clicks and a less smooth way of working.

As you are writing a message type the @symbol to open the list of phrase templates for your unit. Select one by pressing enter and continue with your message or add another template. You can still open the list the old way by clicking the button next to the chat.

We hope this update gives you a smoother and quicker way to chat with your patients.
